LONDON LIFE CENTENNIAL BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT SET

The host Concordia Stingers will be looking for their fourth London Life Centennial Basketball Tournament championship when the 20th annual winter classic takes place January 3 and 4.

The two-day event will also feature University of Prince Edward Island, University of Western Ontario and Carleton University. Opening round action will take place on Friday night with the consolation and championship matches scheduled for the following afternoon.

Concordia concluded the first portion of its 1985-86 schedule December 3 with a 100-74 victory over Trois-Rivieres. It stretched the Stingers record in conference play to 3-0 and their overall mark to 11-2. That includes championships in their own Adidas Tip-off Tournament and the McGill and Toronto invitationals. Head coach Doug Daigneault, who now has 407 career victories under his belt, has been relying on the talents of four-year veteran guards Craig Norman and Biagio Caresse and newcomer Rob Latter at center.

Western, guided by Doug Hayes, will be hosting its annual Purple and White Tournament just prior to coming to Concordia. They have a 6-6 record and won't begin Ontario University Athletic Association Western Conference play until mid-January. Fourth year forwards Chris Cavender and Greg Moore and third year man Pete Vandebovenkamp have been the club's most productive players thus far, with the latter averaging 15.6 points a game.

University of Prince Edward Island is 1-2 in Atlantic University Athletic Association play and 6-3 overall. Head coach George Morrison's squad will travel to the Ryerson Tournament in Toronto in late December, the city where UPEI's two top players, forward Mike Morgan and center Trevor Willock hail from.

Carleton has gotten off to a rocky 2-11 start. The Ravens will host their annual Christmas Tournament December 27-29. Coach Paul Armstrong's Ontario University Athletic Association Eastern Conference team has been hampered by injuries. One of the bright lights has been rookie guard Paul LeBreux, who is averaging 17 points a game.
